Allouche Gallery presents “Technostalgia,” a group exhibition showcasing the works of eight international artists premiering in SoHo on Tuesday June 11th, from 6-9pm .

“Technostalgia” delves into the technological and industrial aesthetics from bygone eras, each artist offering their distinct artistic visions. Contemporary artists have increasingly embraced Post-Internet aesthetics, a trend often observed amid significant industrial and technological shifts.

The contributors to “Technostalgia” engage in a multifaceted dialogue: they respond to, reflect upon, or even diverge from the pervasive influence of the internet in its current iteration.

It’s become a liberatory practice to create imagery that demands meticulous dedication, effort, and time, prompting viewers to immerse themselves in the intricacies of artwork that evoke technology without being constrained by it.
